The future of online coffee commerce

Time machine took us somewhere around 2025. Do we still crave our morning coffee for a kick of energy? Is a cup of Joe in our favourite coffee shop still a thing or do we only press the button of the automatic coffee machine in our kitchen? Do we even leave home anymore? What's the future of speciality coffee commerce? Coffeedesk, the leading coffee and coffee accessories eCommerce in Europe, helps us find answers to all those questions. Written by Aga Bukowska for Standart in collaboration with Coffeedesk.

About us page

Coffee & Commerce is a series of fireside chats hosted by the ReturnLogic team to connect eCommerce storeowners together through casual discussions on LinkedIn Live. Guests include some of the best and brightest in the business—talking about what works, what doesn't, and what's new in eCommerce

What do we find in this brave new world?

Opportunity, that's certain. eCommerce is skyrocketing, and coffee is among the top sellers, boasting a 38.6% CAGR (Compound Annual Growth Rate), claimed Kathy Cummins, head of analytics at Hinge Global during The Impact of Covid-19 on Coffee eCommerce webinar. The CAGR for the total US coffee industry is estimated to be 4.8%, so the difference is tremendous. The Coffeedesk cat predicts the following trends from her crystal ball (and we confirm them with data): The rise of home coffee consumption Manual brew popularization Curiosity, spare time and education Sustainable and green consumerism Coffee subscription service rise Omnipresent omnichannel

DAO Pattern in Java

The Data Access Object (DAO) pattern is a structural pattern that allows us to isolate the application/business layer from the persistence layer (usually a relational database but could be any other persistence mechanism) using an abstract API.
